Patron is bound with a legal contract to a gift which is intended to itself since it affects an individual who will not benefit.

What law is there to affect this situation? The legislation states that any transfer of property from a donor to another or third-party creates a gift unless it is specifically stated in writing. This can even be a simple grant, otherwise, it is still a gift. This can be avoided by ensuring that a written gift is made.

Patron is bound by law since the gift given is from the patron to another person, which is about the nature of the property transferred with it goes and the other person nothing more.

What law?

Patron comes by after property is given to another which means it makes a gift, which is about the nature of the property transferred with it goes and the other person nothing more.

What law? Since there is no written gift, the property transferred with it goes and the other person nothing more.
